The following policies set down our approach to the identification of modern slavery risks and steps to be taken to prevent slavery and human trafficking in our operations:

Due Diligence Processes for Slavery and Human Trafficking

The Company undertakes due diligence when considering taking on new suppliers, and regularly reviews its existing suppliers. The Company's due diligence process includes building long-standing relationships with suppliers and making clear our expectations of business partners and can include evaluating the modern slavery and human trafficking risks of each new supplier invoking sanctions against suppliers that fail to improve their performance in the event of non-compliance, including the termination of the business relationship.

Performance indicators

The Company requires prospective partners to verify their ethical practices as part of technical agreements with requests for policies which verify their ethical practices ensuring compliance with international standards for Human Rights. Where a partner cannot provide the assurance of their ethical practices we will ultimately review the use of that supplier going forward.

If it became apparent or there is a reasonable suspicion that any of our business partners were involved in forced labour, child labour or any practice in which people are exploited or exposed to dangerous conditions, we would review our business relationship with that partner and if unable to resolve the issue to our satisfaction, we would terminate our relationship with that business partner.

Training

To ensure a good understanding of the risks of modern slavery and human trafficking in our business and supply chains, the Company requires that all staff complete an online training course on an annual basis.
